FRESHMEN EVENTS

The opening of the current school year saw four of the Tech students of the previous year as a nucleus of the large enrollment of the College Freshman Class. However, a large majority of the class were old Tech students who had served in the great war, and were again returning to assume their respective studies in a real educational institution. It was with extreme pleasure that they were again welcomed back to the old school which we all so dearly love, and whose honor and high standards we are laboring diligently to uphold.

All in all, the members of the Freshman Class came back to school immensely intellectual and extremely dignified. Early in the school year the class was organized and the class officers were elected. Under the leadership of President Finley, the Freshmen have been pushing steadily forward and they have made a name for themselves which will never be forgotten. Under the class colors of green and white, and with the appropriate motto of "Get There," the class has striven to uphold the high ideals of the school. Those who will be here next year will again be the leaders who will help raise the school to a still higher level in education—no small task indeed. As for those who find it impossible to return, the Tech will never have a more loyal group of real supporters.

Among the social events of the year, we find the College Ball the greatest success of the season. This gala affair was given on the 16th of January. With the aid of the College Sophomores a very successful and delightful dance was given. Streamers of class colors formed the overhead decorations, and beautiful cozy corners, made of green and white lattice work decorated by climbing roses, made the most complete and unique decorations that have ever been seen in the Tech gymnasium.

In athletics the Freshmen held full sway throughout the school year. Five members of the class won letters and sweaters on the football team; and in basketball, three of the first team men were College Freshmen. In the class series in basketball, the Freshmen won the cup, defeating all of their rivals by large scores. Likewise in baseball, they easily carried away the prize by winning every game played—one of them from a combined team of Junior and Senior Vocationals. On the 24th of March, the College and the Trades united and defended their colors against the onrush of the remaining students of the school. At no time were the colors in danger. The fight lasted throughout the afternoon, but the College and Trades stuck to their posts, and when darkness came, their colors still floated from the tower of the Administration building.

In the space remaining we might still note that three of the Student Body officers are College Freshmen. Three members of the famous College quartette, which so delightfully entertained the public on Stunt Night, are College Freshmen. The College Freshmen have also been prominent in both literary societies, the two Glee Clubs; and when it comes to the Tuesday Night Discussion Club, well, Hank Kennedy simply has to have his way.

It is with a feeling of regret that we now note the close of the school year. Even though it will only be a few short months until we may see each other again, we all have that feeling deep down in our hearts which makes us wish times would fly less rapidly at times and speed up at others. During our summer vacation, we will all look forward to the time when we shall be able to meet once more with our school friends; when we may again walk into the office of our beloved president, Mr. Frazier, and say: "We're glad to be back."

Freshmen Class Poem

Just a Freshie, just an ordinary chap;
Just a boy or girl full of snap,
Just a feller who loves his work;
Just a Freshie who hates to shirk.
Just a Buddy with a mind of right
Who says, I'm with you in the fight.
Just a chap as has no frills,
Filled with pep right up to the gills.
Just a student in school every day;
Waiting for the time to have something to say,
Looking ahead to that time just before
When he will become a College Sophomore.
That's the Freshie of the Idaho "Tech";
He is out for his worldly peck;
With all of his knowledge unfurled,
He will surely astound this old world.
