

Coffee Dance

Wednesday evenings were anticipated by everyone as a break in the old grind. The dances were short (from 6:45 'til 7:45) but they always drew a large crowd. The dance was convenient because civilian students are required to dress for dinner on Wednesday evening. The swell music of the Navy orchestra was responsible for a large part of the attendance.

IDAHO STATE COLLEGE LIBRARY

Did you forget something, Glaze? This is supposed to be a dance!

Two examples of the profound modes displayed by most girls at the Southern Branch

Judging from the mournful faces displayed by this group, the dance must have been a good one.

If you'll hold this picture to a mirror, you'll get the desired effect. In the mirror, you'll see the orchestra responsible for the swell at the Coffee Dances.

"It's a lot easier to wait for your date here. What if some early bird has gotten the jim?"

What is this, an illustrated story? Tch, tch!

The gang takes time out to rest up after "strenuous" dancing. Could be we take time out to shoot "el torro?"

Spring Will

Be a Little

Late This Year

"Yes, Mom, we had a wonderful day. Even the rain didn't dampen our spirits. We have observed Easter in regal fashion.

"After Al picked me up this morning, we went to the Episcopal Church for Easter services. They were doubly impressive this morning, what with all the beautiful flowers and Father Asboe's splendid sermon. Communion was exceptionally lively today, too. The serene atmosphere prevailed as we left the church and it was just so pleasant to look around at everyone in their outfits and see how reassured they appeared.

"After church we went to the Shanghai and had a delicious dinner, and then we came here and read the funny papers. When we had eaten all the Easter eggs that we could find, we went to the show. On our walk in the rain after the show we both expressed the hope that next year at this time will see the peace that Easter stands for. Guess that's what everyone is hoping for. We walked home, and oh yes, Mom, it was such a wonderful day."

Easter Sunday

With You

Dean stretches for a crucial point

Whose ball?

From here it looks like fun.

"A Song to Remember"

